What is Debt Review?

Debt Review is a legal debt relief process introduced by the National Credit Act (NCA).

How does

it works

Assessment

Registered Debt Counsellors will carefully evaluate your financial situation, taking into account your income, expenses and outstanding debts. This assessment will help them determine if you are eligible for the Debt Review process.

Proposal

If you qualify, the Debt Counsellor will work closely with you to create a personalised debt repayment plan. This plan aims to reduce your monthly debt repayments and make them more affordable, allowing you to regain control of your finances.

Negotiation

Once the proposal is prepared, the Debt Counsellor approaches your Credit Providers on your behalf. They will negotiate with the creditors to reach an agreement on the restructured repayment plan. The goal is to achieve lower interest rates, extended repayment terms and a manageable monthly payment.

Court Proceedings

After the negotiations, the proposed debt repayment plan will be presented to the Magistrates Court or Consumer Tribunal. Upon approval, it will become a binding Court Order, providing you with the necessary protection and ensuring that your credit providers adhere to the new repayment terms.

Things to consider before undergoing Debt Review:

No access to credit:

When undergoing Debt Review you will not be able to have access to any new credit until you are withdrawn from Debt Review or have received a clearance certificate.

Credit Bureau Record:

Debt Review is flagged on your credit report, affecting your credit score.
